Foreword

In this country today more people, per capita, than ever before collect what they persist in calling—rather loosely—Americana. In the intervening years since the era of Sabin, attention to some phases of that subject has unmistakably increased steadily and grown more widespread, deep and ardent. The subject itself, however, as a field of interest for the vast majority of collectors, has at the same time—both in temporal length and in territorial width—conspicuously narrowed. Towards many of its branches we have developed a marked indifference; meagre attention is now given to books relating to Canada, Mexico, our various sister republics further South, or even to those having to do with our own insular possessions.

So pronounced and well-nigh universal has become concentration on books confined exclusively to the history of the United States proper that our collectors, as a whole, can no longer be considered as collecting Americana—in its broad, hemispherical and true sense—at all. They collect instead on only one isolated segment of that subject. They collect: U.S.-IANA.

Nor has shrinkage halted there. Even in regard to affairs limited to this particular republic, interest and curiosity has undergone notable constriction. Even in that limited field, the typical collector now confines his activities, rather rigidly, to books on some one region, state or era, to some conspicuous person or to some specific historical event. Whatever subject he selects will be found, generally speaking, to belong to a relatively recent past. Events of a more dim and remote antiquity are practically ignored. Adventures, movements and explorations of the last two hundred and fifty years, within our interior valleys and along the shifting rim of our far-flung Western frontier, seem to have more meaning than equally heroic, romantic and note-worthy occurrences of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, along the Atlantic seaboard: the nebulous episodes of original discovery, first settlement and early colonization. Collecting has gone somewhat modern and veers Westward with the Course of Empire.

Changed taste and fashion in book-buying are vividly revealed when the libraries of Barlow, Brevoort, Brinley, Carter-Brown, Church, Lenox and Menzies—all assembled in the latitudinarian tradition of a long-gone yesterday—are compared with those of Auerbach, Barber, Braislin, Holliday, Littell, Paullin and Shea —dispersed at public sale between 1927 and 1954. All of these later collections unite in reflecting, along with an emphatic preference for books published since 1700, a predominant, almost complete, preoccupation with those relating to this country, notably so with those concerning affairs in the Ohio Valley or regions further West.

Into the causes—doubtless many and complex—of these prevailing limitations in interest we need not go. The point is that they exist, and that, because of them, a bibliography of United States history patterned to meet the resulting reduced requirements of popular demand can be, in spite of its drastic compression, of definite usefulness to the larger portion of our present book-buying public.

For the select and dauntless few who still collect in the grand manner, who still wield their sickle in a larger field, the diminished subject here selected for bibliographical treatment will obviously be inadequate. It should be sufficiently ample, however, to meet, in some measure, the needs of the group for which it was designed, that large group which sets its sights less high and which is composed of the average collector, the average librarian, the average antiquarian bookseller.

As an aggregate of only two full-time working years could be devoted to this undertaking, the compiler feels grateful that his labors were confined to books in such a circumscribed field. His task, though thereby greatly lightened, was yet by no means devoid of difficulty. Still confronting him was what one might well expect to find, on a subject holding world-wide appeal, through a sizable sweep of two hundred and fifty prolific printing years,—a formidable literature, in many languages.

To cope with material so extensive obviously entailed considerable selectivity. Complete coverage could be aimed at only for books of great general interest, high importance and of more than ordinary commercial value, those arbitrarily graded, for the purposes of this work, as "scarce" and "rare" and worth twenty-five dollars and upwards.

Of the innumerable books classifiable as merely "uncommon"—and having approximate current values of between ten and twenty-five dollars—only a highly selective representation has been attempted. Selectivity is increased for books belonging to this class when their appeal is of a local rather than of a national or regional character. Formal local histories are mostly excluded; those of a more unusual nature are rather scrupulously entered.

Eliminated almost altogether from consideration are items so insignificant or so "common" as to command, currently, prices under ten dollars. The same is true of books, regardless of their value, belonging to the following categories: pamphlets of fewer than twelve leaves; works in sets of more than four volumes; almanacs; periodicals; serials; bibliographies; natural histories; juvenile literature; textbooks; sermons; orations; laws and legislative documents of a strictly governmental nature; dramatic, poetical and fictional compositions, even though based upon or dealing with historical subjects; and everything else of a primarily imaginative or literary nature.

In a work such as this any attempt to give exact monetary values to individual entries would defeat any aspiration for its permanent usefulness. Desirable books in this particular field have, within the last half century, uniformly advanced in value. They will doubtless continue so to do, therefore the attaching of current market figures to them would prove of fugitive validity.

In preparing this bibliography, however—as the preceding paragraphs will have already revealed—commercial value, used in an approximate, inexact or general sense, has, for certain other purposes, been freely employed. As a basis, both for determining an item's eligibility for inclusion and for indicating its relative grade or status in the hierarchy of books, it constitutes the most competent yardstick available. Willingness on the part of interested buyers, consistently and persistently, to pay, for a given book, prices within a certain general range, is the acid test of its over-all worthiness. This consensus of informed opinion furnishes, as nothing else can, a composite picture of a book's combined importance, desirability, the extent of public demand for it and the degree of difficulty involved in acquiring it.

When first deciding to assign entries to various grades it was hoped that such grades might be clearly indicated without any reference to dollar values. This was found impossible. Differentiating books into grades merely as "uncommon,"

"scarce," "mildly rare," "quite rare," "very rare" and "inordinately rare" is too vague. To convey a clear concept of relative rank the suggestion as to where one grade ends and another begins must be made fairly precise. That problem can only be solved by giving some idea of the commercial values within which fall those various grades. To some mild extent gradations must be based upon a monetary standard.

Owing to the inherent variability of book prices, as well as to the fluctuating uncertainty of money values, caution demands that grades to which values are attached must be in quite wide brackets. The values of books falling within each grade are thereby sublimated to an approximate hint only.

As will be seen in the table of value-symbols which follows this "Foreword," the four grades to which are assigned all "rare" books are of such considerable variance in estimated value as not to be violently affected by normal change. On the other hand, between "uncommon" and "scarce" books no differentiation has been attempted. The table indicates the line of demarcation existing between these two, but the individual brackets they would occupy, if separate price distinctions were set up, would be so narrow as to be highly impermanent. Today's "uncommon" books very often become the "scarce" books of tomorrow. Consequently, these two categories are grouped indiscriminately together in a single grade.

Just as restricted operating time has limited scope and selection, economic consideration —joined to a disinclination to produce a volume of unwieldy dimensions—has dictated all attainable frugality in the matter of space. Titles have been shortened; descriptions are greatly abbreviated and largely unpunctuated; collations have been confined to essentials; and bindings—being merely the protective covering apparatus of books and not strictly integral parts of them—are gone into only in the case of occasional pamphlets where wrappers were included in the printer's pagination. It is hoped that none of these devices will defeat identification or intelligibility. In entering anonymous and pseudonymous titles the first substantive word has been used, unless a proper name or place appears prominently in the title, in which case the entry is indexed under that word. This is a departure from usual practice, but having been adopted years ago by the compiler in making the notes which form the basis of this work, it is followed here. It offers the distinct advantage of presenting together various entries on the same subject. Sabin employed it to a great extent.

Locations of many "rare" books—those graded "b" or higher—are supplied, when repositories containing perfect copies are known to the compiler. Absence of a location symbol does not mean that no copies of that particular entry are known. It means only that the compiler has no information as to where copies may be found.

It should also be explained that in giving the collation of the original edition of an entry the compiler feels his responsibility, in that particular, ends. Collations for later editions and translations have been included, when known, but have not been meticulously verified.

Grateful acknowledgment is due to many sources of assistance: To the Newberry Library, of Chicago, without whose generous financial aid, accompanying its grant of a Fellowship in Bibliography to the compiler, this undertaking would have been impossible; to the Antiquarian Booksellers' Association of America and to the California Book Club Quarterly, for publishing the proposed plan of this work, in 1952; to the New York Public Library and to the Yale University Library, for having their holdings checked against all entries graded herein as "rare," and to the American Antiquarian Society, for performing the same service for those relating to regions East of the Mississippi; to my assistant, Mrs. William C. Brown, by whose eternal vigilance many disfiguring blunders have been prevented; and to the following gentlemen, all of whom have contributed invaluable aid: Mr. Peter Decker, and Mr. Edward Eberstadt, of New York City; Mr. J. C. Dykes, of College Park, Md.; Bishop L. J. Fitz Simon, of Amarillo, Tex.; Mr. Everett D. Graff, of Winnetka, Ill.; Mr. A. H. Greenly, of Hoboken, N. J.; and Mr. Thomas W. Streeter, of Morristown, N. J.

The co-operation of those mentioned must be construed as merely an approval of the plan of the work, not of the manner in which it has been carried out. For its execution, for all shortcomings, errors and omissions, the compiler is alone responsible.

Abbreviations and Symbols

Places of publication, printed in Italics, are not always completely written out. Boston appears as B, Cambridge, Mass. as C, London as L and Paris as P.

Others are shown in shortened form [their first three or four letters only being given, such as Alb for Albany, Amst for Amsterdam]. These are generally so obvious as to present no difficulty to the reader.

A few of the less obvious follow:

Des M for Des Moines.
Fredkbg for Fredericksburg.
Indp for Indianapolis.
Lis for Lisbon.
N Hav for New Haven.
N Lond for New London.
N O for New Orleans.
S F for San Francisco.
S L for Salt Lake City.
Sav for Savannah.
St L for St. Louis.
St P for Saint Paul.
St Ptbg for St. Petersburg.
Wmsbg for Williamsburg.

Book sizes are indicated by:

F for folio.
Q for quarto.
O for octavo.
D for duodecimo.

Smaller sizes are shown in the ordinary manner.

Other abbreviations follow common practice and require no long listing, but a few may be clarified to advantage:

adds	additions.	p	page [or, when plurality is indicated, pages].
anr	another.	pl	plate.
capt t	caption title.	rptd	reprinted.
cor	corrected.	tab	table.
facs	facsimile.	t	title.
impr	imprint [i. e. place where published].
l	leaf [or, when preceded by figures showing plurality, leaves].

Value symbols, showing relative grades of value, importance and scarcity are indicated by the following lower case letters: [when no symbol accompanies an entry "a" value or less is to be inferred] a - covers, under that one symbol, both those books that are merely uncommon [roughly of a value from $10.00 to $25.00] and those that are scarce [worth from $25.00 to $100.00]. All of these "a" books are obtainable without much difficulty.

b - represents books that are mildly rare, obtainable, only with some difficulty, at prices ranging between $100.00 and $300.00.

c - represents books that are quite rare, obtainable, only with considerable difficulty, at prices ranging between $300.00 and $600.00.

d - represents very rare books, obtainable, only with great difficulty, at prices between $600.00 and $1000.00.

dd - represents superlatively rare books, almost unobtainable, worth $1000.00 and upwards.

For Further Clarification See Foreword.

Location symbols. Many of the location symbols employed are such as should be self-explanatory. An abbreviation for a city followed by P refers to that city's Public Library; if followed by H, it means its Historical Society; if followed by U, it refers to its University. [Examples: DenvP; ChiH; ChiU].

Similarly H, S or U following an abbreviation for a state should be interpreted as meaning that particular state's Historical Society, or its State Library, or its University. [Examples: KasH, IndS, KyU].

The list of symbols appended are the only ones requiring individual explanation:

The Indian captive. A narrative of the adventures... of: Clev 1860. 16° 68 c AA N Y
—rptd. Fostoria O 1896. 16° 70 a
After being stolen as a lad in northwestern Ohio, successively traded to various western tribes, and finally adopted by the Snakes, he wandered with them as far as California and Oregon. Basically authentic, though confused in its details and geography, it is one of the most remarkable and—in spite of its relatively late publication date—one of the rarest items belonging to captivity literature. Mr. E. J. Wessen concludes, from evidence uncovered, that this narrative was actually written by John H. A. Bone.

Carver penetrated farther into the West than any other English explorer before the Revolution. Like his French predecessor —Verendrye—he was seeking a transcontinental waterway, but, aside from exploring some tributaries of the Mississippi, he made no substantial contributions to geographical knowledge; his book, however, stimulated curiosity concerning routes to the Pacific, later satisfied by Mackenzie and Lewis and Clark. The tobacco plant plate, added first to the third edition, is sometimes found inserted in copies of the first and second editions. It belongs properly to neither.

—anr. ed. B 1793. O 80

In this suit, brought by Chisholm against the State of Georgia, was involved for the first time the problem of state sovereignty. The specific finding—that a State could be so sued—was of minor significance; it was ignored by the defendant, and, by a 1798 amendment, such suits were precluded. However, the "obiter dicta" assertion that State sovereignty was limited under the Constitution, had far-reaching implications of the greatest magnitude. It reversed the theory, hitherto unquestioned, that States were independent sovereign republics confederated for some purposes only, but not to the extent of affecting their sovereignty. Years of bitter argument had to pass until a final decision resulted from the arbitrament of arms.

Gen. Collot's survey—the most detailed of the western interior up to his time—was made in 1796, probably in concert with Genet's abortive scheme for involving that section in attacking the Spanish possessions in Florida and Louisiana. Official account of the first voyage attempting an adequate examination and charting of our northwest coast; on Cook's discovery of Nootka, England based her claim to that region. Following the publication in above forms, various abridged editions, issued in one, two, three and four octavo volumes, were issued in New York, Worcester, Philadelphia, London, Dublin, and several French and German editions on the continent. For unofficial versions see under William Ellis, John Ledyard, John Rickman and Henry Zimmerman. Cook's two earlier voyages were confined to discoveries in the South Pacific. The official publication of the first, edited by Hawkesworth, appeared in 1773, three volumes quarto, 52 maps and plates; that of the second, by Cook himself, in 1777, two volumes quarto, 87 maps and plates.

Account of the Portola expedition and the establishment of the first settlements in upper California, at San Diego and Monterey. The original Spanish edition was immediately suppressed by Spain to keep its information from the rest of the world. Intrinsic importance and superlative rarity, combined with its status as the first book devoted entirely to California, place this item, either in Spanish or English, in the top rank of memorable and desirable California books. A preliminary account of this expedition—Extracto de noticias del puerto de Monterrey—had appeared at Mexico earlier in the year, in two issues [Folio, six pages; Quarto, eight pages].

Decalves gives the fantastic narrative of an overland trip from New Orleans to the northwest coast in 1786–7. The journey described was undoubtedly imaginary and consequently he did not obtain, as claimed, from John Vandeleur's lips the story of his 7-year captivity among the Indians of the northwest coast; but the Vandeleur story, incorporated in all editions of the Decalves' narrative, undoubtedly has factual basis. For other accounts of it see Van Leason, James, A narrative of a voyage, and Vandeleur, John, A history of the voyages [etc.].

That the House edition has priority is indicated by the fact that many copies were seemingly issued before the large map was available. The plates of scenery in the Senate edition were lithographed by Weber & Co.; in the House edition these are usually all done by C. B. Graham, though in some copies the 24 plates in Abert's report were executed, in a superior manner, anonymously.

May be considered, though not so stated, as an enlarged second edition of the preceding entry, continuing the annals to the latter part of 1837, but also containing the earlier events, to San Jacinto as given in the other. Both reprint valuable papers, including Almonte's Statistical report on Texas, [q.v.]. In this completed form, it is the only comprehensive history, from the Mexican point of view, of the war for Texas independence. General Filisola was active on this frontier from 1833, was Santa Anna's second-in-command, and led the Mexican army on its retreat from San Jacinto.

The expedition of Don Diego Dionisio de Penalosa... from Santa Fé to the river Mischipi and Quivira in 1662. N Y 1882. O 102 a
After his removal as Spanish Governor of New Mexico in 1668, Penalosa interested France in undertaking the conquest of that province. The narrative, here translated from a 17th century MS., of a fictitious journey, ascribed to a non-existent author, was presumably written by Penalosa himself, to impress French authorities with the wealth of the region described and his experience and knowledge thereof. There seems little doubt that if La Salle's last voyage had been successful, it would have been followed by another French expedition under this imposter.

The author operated farms in New York and Rhode Island and seems to have acted as agent in a gigantic British scheme to purchase from Georgia seventeen million acres bordering on the Mississippi. This, tied in with intrigues to acquire Florida from Spain and to take over the disaffected Western country from the United States, undoubtedly had for object the confinement of the United States to the Eastern seaboard.

The two volumes—Voyages and Mémoires —were apparently, in early editions, sold both separately and in sets. This explains the frequent appearance of individual volumes and of sets not uniform and often with different imprints and dates. As collectors today insist on the set-form, the work is here so treated. What constitutes a third volume, but of no historical significance and not generally found with the others, is entered separately, below, under Suplement.

Lahontan's narrative, of considerable value when confined to his actual sojourneyings in the Lake region, was unfortunately disfigured by his inserting an account of a pretended trip west of the Mississippi about as convincing as the legends of the sea-serpent.

From this volume the portion devoted to his "Dialogues"—a diatribe against Christianity—was included in both English editions and in the 1705 French editions. Most later French editions were, along with his European travels, issued separately as entered above. French editions of all three volumes were, after 1704, so changed and polished as to verify the suspicion that editorial work on them was done by the apostate monk, Nicolas Guedeville. Some authorities even believe him to have been the veritable author of the "Dialogues."

Evans states that this was first issued in two parts, in June and July. First American book describing the northwest coast. Probably based on Ledyard's recollections, but many sections show unblushing theft from John Rickman's account published at London in 1781; Ledyard himself would not have stooped to this practice, which indicates that another hand prepared the book for publication. See also Sparks, Jared, Life of John Ledyard. The rare map differs from the one in Rickman only in a decorative border added to its cartouche.

Originally issued in 20 installments, consequently bound copies vary in the matter of placing plates. Some plates having titles in English are explainable as being strays from the simultaneously begun, but not completed, English version, apparently abandoned after the third installment, as no more parts have been located; these parts end at page 76 and contain 12 plates. Some copies of the German edition carry, in place of the undated title-page [with its misleading indication that the text descriptions were both written and translated by Douglas], a corrected one dated 1858 in which he is credited only with being the translator.

Though meager in information on Lewis and Clark, this was the first book giving any of their activities. The map, by Nicholas King, who is also supposed to have prepared this material for publication, was of the lower trans-Mississippi, drawn from Dunbar's survey, and is found in only a few copies. The Sibley-Dunbar descriptions of the Texas-Louisiana frontier gave the first formal and satisfactory picture of the southern portion of the Louisiana Purchase.

The same atlas—issued in Paris—was used with all of the above editions. It came with all plates uncolored, with some only colored and with all colored. In the latter state, as originally issued, with the last name of the artist—Charles Bodmer—stamped in blind on each of the forty-eight large plates, this work is the most beautiful, faithful and vivid ever produced depicting western plains and Indians. In 1844 a London engraver, Lumley, reproduced the atlas, even to its title-page, but the inferiority of its plates and the absence of Bodmer's stamp make it readily distinguishable. At Leipsic, early in the 20th century, plates were re-issued with brief letterpress descriptions in an edition of 100 copies from the original plates under the title Nord-Amerika in Bildern; some of these are found finely colored, but none were so issued.

PACIFIC RAILROAD EXPLORATIONS. 7672
Report of the Secretary of War on...: H.Exec.Doc.129. Wash 1855. O 43 a
This report—Document 129—summarizing the several surveys was accompanied by the eight reports themselves, all bearing the same document number. For information on these separate reports, see entries under the various explorers: I, Humphreys, Andrew A.; II, Stevens, Isaac A.; III & IV, Beckwith, Edward G.; V, Whipple, Amiel W.; VI, Pope, John; VII, Parke, John G.; VIII, Williamson, R. S.
This document was originally, issued as an entity, bound in two volumes of text, together with a third volume containing eleven maps and profiles [on fourteen sheets]. Of a contemplated third volume of text, only one report—that of Frederick W. Lander, q. v.—was issued in 1856, bearing the same document number. Of it only two copies are known; hence a complete set of the octavo edition, with all nine reports and the maps, is not easily assembled. A set will have enhanced value if accompanied by the huge folding map made by Warren, engraved by Siebert, and issued at Washington in 1857, both separately and with the quarto edition of the reports; it was the best cartographical work on the West up to its time and some copies were colored.
In 1855–1860 all of above reports, elaborately illustrated and with considerable additions, appeared in quarto form—12 volumes in 13—as House Executive Document 91, serials 791–801, and House Executive Document 56, serials 1054–1055. A Senate issue [Executive Document 78, serials 758–768, and Executive Document 46, serial 992] differed only in the matter of arrangement.

RADICALISM 8341
Radicalism vs. liberty of the press. An account by the editors of the Memphis "Avalanche" of their incarceration by Judge Hunter of the carpet bag criminal court of Memphis for contempt. Memphis 1868. O 79 a
In an all-time high of vituperative abuse, "his Honor" is characterized as: "a petty-tyrant, cowardly poltroon, giddy bigoted fool, insatiable harpy, slimy reptile, sneaking informer, bankrupt brass-band swindler, mangy cur, hybrid hippograff, slabsided champion of radicalism, contemptible whangdoodle wallowing in the sewers of party filth, the most loathesome blotch that ever polluted the bench, gangrened with corruption, rancid with rascality and feculent with all that is vile; lies buzz in swarms around his mouth like summer flies on kitchen garbage; he is steeped so deep in infamy that if the genius of gravitation descended with the velocity of a sunbeam, it could never even reach him," etc. The "Avalanche" was appropriately named.

First published account of Cook's third and last voyage, preceding the official publication three years. Map is substantially same as in the narrative attributed to John Ledyard, and the texts of the two accounts are quite similar, hence some authorities attribute this book to Ledyard, However, the text shows that its anonymous author was originally on the "Discovery" and not transferred to the "Resolution" until 1777, whereas Ledyard was on the latter throughout the voyage. The American edition, with title-page copying almost exactly that of William Ellis's account of this voyage, has been erroneously ascribed to that officer.

Reply to Hamilton's Full vindication of ... Congress. All of these Tory pamphlets, issued as by A. W. Farmer [i. e., A Westchester farmer], have been also variously ascribed to T. B. Chandler, Charles Inglis and Isaac Wilkins. Seabury was undoubtedly their author, aided some by Wilkins. For Hamilton's rejoinder, see his The Farmer refuted.... Seabury was the pre-eminent exponent of Tory thought in America.

The original issue was probably suppressed by the author as the caricatures bordered on treason. The re-issued form was doubtless made up of the suppressed sheets or printed from the original copper-plates. One of the plates, "Meeting of the Southern emissaries and Lincoln," had evidently been lost in storage, so does not appear in that issue. Of another supposed issue, with the spurious London imprint, containing fifteen additional plates [forty-five in all], no definite information is available.

Made, in 1845, when war between England and the United States over the Oregon boundary seemed imminent, this trip by Capt. Warre across the northern Rockies to Puget Sound must have had some military purpose. However, any report of that nature became waste-paper on his return to London, as an amicable adjustment had then been made;

but a better fate attended the views he had painted and were here magnificently reproduced; they remain the only western colorplates comparable in beauty to those by Bodmer accompanying Maximilian's Travels. The dedication forming prelim. p. 3 and 4 was not issued in all copies.

The first United States scientific expedition by sea. Wilkes sailed along and surveyed the whole Northwest coast and his exploring parties penetrated into the interior at many points. The official edition of the Narrative was followed, 1846–1858, by volumes giving scientific data; these were numbered 6 to 17, 20 and 23 [volumes 18, 19, 21, 22 and 24 never issued].

One of the most famous and most popular captivity narratives. Williams, Harvard graduate, in charge of the church at Greenfield when that place was attacked by Indians, in 1703, was taken, with others, to Canada, his wife and two of his children being tomahawked on the way. As a powerful picture of Indian cruelty, ranks next to the Rowlandson captivity narrative, published in 1682.
